CHIEF TELLS HOW PALMERO'S SLAYER WAS TRACED DOWN

"Then the story came to us that Mrs. Palmiero had been seen standing and waiting down in Monterey any number of times and that she always met an Italian there. When anyone would passing man, both when he was talking to her and when he waited, he would always turn his back and swing around as he was passed so that no one could even get a glimpse at his face. They met down in Center and Western avenues.

"After Palmiero's remains had been taken to the undertaking rooms we grew suspicious of Mrs. Palmiero because she protested so forcibly against bringing the remains back home for the funeral services. She wanted them held in the mortuary in the house of the man who had killed her husband. She said that she would not let anyone see the body, but for the reason for this, she made her first slip. 'I would feel so bad (meaning about the death of her husband) but for the fact that she said so loudly and excitedly, she didn't mean it in that way. I mean they would remember about the funeral and they would ask for the paper and I could not let them because they are so little.

"We worked on this and found more suspicion in her denial of knowledge although she claimed to be constantly loaning money from some body. She said she borrowed large sums but when we questioned her she wouldn't name us the men nor places where she got it.

"From Angelo Contante, who we took that night with Frank Palmiero, the dead man's brother, we found that he had engaged in a knife battle with Jim Capparelli, her brother-in-law. We investigated and found that the cause of the trouble was for fifteen months. From Charles L. Larkin, chief of detectives at Chicago, we learned that Capparelli was still a C. & N. W. convict. From the fact that his work had been on Oct. 16, ten days before the crime. We also learned of the trouble. That exonerated Capparelli.

"The fact that Frank Palmiero and Angelo Contante were the first to see the corpse directed suspicion towards them because it is only natural to believe that if shooting occurred in the yard of a building where eight or nine people were they would all be sent to jail to discover the cause. When Angelo and Frank arrived, Boschi, Palmiero's father-in-law, was grouping about with a light and an electric light above him. Personally, however, I do not believe that the old man had anything to do with the crime. Palmiero told Mrs. Boschi that her husband and brother were dead she ordered Boschi to get an undertaker. We really do not believe that she saw the man before he was in the undertaking rooms.

"We went along slowly and all at once we hit upon the fact that the old lady (Mrs. Boschi) was born at Palmiero's house. She was born at Palmiero's house. She used to talk about it all the time. She neither evidenced too much feeling as from what place her son-in-law was buried, and so we had to work this up, as was the case with every little thing which came to our attention.

"Detectives Tracy and Harry Smith worked among the Italians and finally learned from a young fellow they call the 'Fifty Cent Kid' that he had met Cornevale on North street a few days before the murder. Cornevale was near a small shed owned by the railroad and used for storing fire hose. He shouted, 'Hello there, 'Fifty Cent Kid,' where are you going?

"It was after we learned this on Thursday that we decided that just a week to the hour following the murder would be the appropriate time to swoop down on the whole gang. We got Mrs. Palmiero and four boarders at her home. We brought the old man along too, but left his wife because Mrs. Palmiero said that the children were sick. Out at South Janesville we picked up Cornevale.

"Just before this, however, we learned that Cornevale had fled off the right of the murder. Then we found that he was in the habit of carrying a gun and that he did not have one at the present time. Where was he? We decided to follow him, so we had to get busy there.

"We didn't get much out of them at first and so we let them all go but in the morning we kept following them. They were pretty clear sailing from then on. Sunday night we sent Frank Golick, the man at whose house Palmiero had been the night he was killed, into Cornevale's cell. We prompted him to tell Cornevale.

"The time he wanted to know what she was saying. When Golick told him they were talking he trembled. In heavy whispers he trembledly said, 'Bring them to me, I want to hear it from their lips. Bring them to me.'" that Mrs. Palmiero and Mrs. Boschi had confessed to us what he would say. Every time when we questioned him and told him things we had discovered as evidence against him he would say, 'Did she? Did she? Did she?' tell you that? Did she say that?"

"All the time he wanted to know what she was saying. When Golick told him they were talking he trembled. In heavy whispers he trembledly said, 'Bring them to me, I want to hear it from their lips. Bring them to me.'"

"I went over the entire evening of the murder with him—in the barbers shop, in the saloons, about town, and finally at the house of his mother. Palmiero down in Monterey of his carrying a gun, and of her buying a $50 diamond ring for him in Chicago.

"I went over the entire evening of the murder with him—in the barbers shop, in the saloons, about town, and finally at the house of his mother. Palmiero down in Monterey of his carrying a gun, and of her buying a $50 diamond ring for him in Chicago.

"The water is twenty feet deep and swift and considerable trouble is experienced in working. Long handled rakes, probes, and Officer Roy Worthington hit upon the scheme of using an electric light. This was being experimented with and improved upon when the water was deepened. Magnets are also to be employed, six being tied together to drag over the river bottom. The district attorney is determined to secure the gun.

"The receipt Saturday of two letters written in Italian and addressed to Mrs. Frank Palmiero, and St. Paul railway, with instructions to give them to the chief of police, strengthened suspicion against Cornevale. The letters were both dated that he was the man who had murdered Palmiero. Three different translators at as many different times saw the letters. They bore the stamp of the Janesville postoffice.

"In order to acquaint the parents of the high school pupils with the system of the work there, and to bring about better co-operation between the school and the home, the school authorities have arranged a parents-teachers meeting for Friday afternoon at the high school. The meeting is planned primarily for the parents of the freshmen, but all parents are urged to be present.

"Principal Shearer is most anxious that many will be on hand. The system at the high school provides for an active co-operation between the school and the parents, and this can be made more efficient if the parents have a thorough understanding of the nature of the school work, and of what is expected of the parents from the school.

"Members of the school board will be urged to go to the meeting of the body, and to talk on more general subjects of education.

"During the past few years much has been done throughout the country in working out these courses of study so that the highest degree of efficiency can be obtained. The plan consists in substance of outlining the work of the teachers along the latest developments in the field of pedagogy, and attempting to make the work of all teachers and all schools as nearly uniform as possible.

REV. HOFFMEISTER LEAVES PASTORATE

Pastor of St. Peter's Evangelical Lutheran Church to Take Pulpit in Vancouver, Wash.
At a meeting of the congregation of St. Peter's Evangelical Lutheran church held last evening, the resignation of their pastor, the Reverend E. O. Hoffmeister, was accepted. Mr. Hoffmeister will leave at once for Vancouver, Wash., where he will fill the pulpit of St. Paul's Evangelical Lutheran church.
For the past five and a half years Mr. Hoffmeister has been at the head of the local church, and during that time has endeavored himself to the congregation. He was respected and admired for his courage and for his sympathetic kindness. Members of the congregation join in wishing him all possible success in his new field. Since his arrival here from Defiance, Ohio, he has almost made the interests of his church and his congregation his own.

At the meeting last night the Reverend F. E. Cooper of the Lake Park church in Milwaukee and G. K. R. Bremer, pastor of the Wisconsin congregational church of the Synod of the Northwest, were in attendance. The latter will make all the necessary arrangements for the pastorate during the time the pastorate remains vacant. As yet no definite steps have been taken to secure a man to fill Mr. Hoffmeister's place, but it is expected that someone will be engaged in a short time.

The officers of the church announce that the children who are receiving instruction in the catechism, preparatory for confirmation, will meet Saturday as usual. The minister who fills the pulpit on Sunday will teach.

MANY CIGARMAKERS
STRIKE IN CHICAGO
---and the Worst Is Yet to Come
[By Associated Press.]
Chicago, Nov. 7.—Without authorization from their local unions between three hundred and four hundred cigar makers of Chicago went on strike today for higher wages, despite the fact that a new scale calling for advances of from $1 to $6 a thousand for cigars, according to grade, is now before the International Union for ratification for referendum vote, the result of which is to be announced November 13.
Cigar manufacturers affected by today's walkout said they were perplexed as to reasons of the action, but admitted the remainder of city's 3,000 cigarmakers would strike before the end of the week.
Mr. Wenger of Wenger & Mandell, said that although Chicago pays the highest wages to its cigarmakers of any city in the country, he recognized the men need more money because of high cost of living.

JAMES W. LOUDON IS KILLED AT CROSSING

JANESVILLE PIONEER MEETS DEATH WHEN STRUCK BY A LOCOMOTIVE AT HIGH STREET.

RESCUED ONLY TO DIE

Pushed From in Front of Passenger Train by Flagman John Dalton an Instant Before He Took Fatal Step.

Age battled age for life on a railway crossing yesterday and wrested a life for a moment from the menacing approach of steam and steel—but only for a moment, for within a few short seconds after the old man fought to escape before an onrushing express, another crushed eternally into him who had been saved but breathes before.
James W. Loudon was the victim. "Old Jack" Dalton was he who saved, only to see the aged man, thirty seconds later, crushed to death by another train he had warned was approaching.

A cheering platform of travelers turned its back as the thrill afforded by the brave deed merged into one of sorrow when the heavy locomotive ran the man down. But a moment before they had voiced their appreciation of "Old Jack's" rescue. Now they were ill. His death cry had stilled them.
James Loudon, eighty-six years of age last April, came to his unexpected and cruelly unfortunate death because he could not keep away from the railway tracks. As in a second childhood and like the lure youth finds in the railway, he was constantly about the depots and tracks. Time and time again they warned him. Time and time again he was jerked violently from before an onrushing locomotive or string of cars, even as he was yesterday. He could not keep away because he couldn't—because he wanted something to take his mind off the thought that he was fast approaching the limit where age must surrender to death. In the depots and on the platforms and about the yards he found pleasure in his old age. He was happy there, but railroad men were nervous and sooner or later they knew, "He'll get it."

The prediction was true. A Northwestern locomotive backing down to the yards struck him at the High street crossing. He was carried and dragged nearly a hundred feet. His body was mangled terribly.

John Dalton, twenty-two years flagman at the crossing, less than half a minute before had thrillingly pulled the man from the path of a northbound passenger train. The act was seen and applauded by the crowds on the Milwaukee road depot platform.

Dalton saw the approaching engine on the other parallel track and warned Loudon of its coming and called to him to wait until it passed. Instead, as soon as the last coach of the passenger train went by, he started.
James Washington Loudon was one of the oldest citizens of Janesville. He was widely known in the city, having lived here for seventy years. For a quarter of a century he was engaged in the shoe business with his brother, Mayhew Vincent Loudon, now the only surviving member of the family of mother and father, four brothers and four sisters who a decade ago began their journey from Vermont in 1846 to take up a new home here in the great golden west.

For many years, too, Mr. Loudon conducted a small farm west of the city on Mineral Point avenue. He took to horticulture and raised excellent fruits for market and also devoted much of his time and land to tobacco.
Many Janesville business men today remember back to the times he helped in the fields and in the orchards of the Loudon farm.

Many can remember Mr. Loudon as a member of the old Bower City band, the nucleus of the present organization. Those boys-at-the-time, no doubt remember him in the Bower City band when it was the regimental band of the fifth Wisconsin, Colonel Cobb's regiment, during the stormy days of the rebellion.
Mr. Loudon was a veteran of the Civil war and with his surviving brother served for fifteen months in the Union army.
James Washington Loudon was born April 12, 1837 at East Topsham, Vermont. At the age of nine years his parents started west. Through New England they traveled by the clumsy prairie schooner until they reached the Great Lakes. From the lake boat they landed at Milwaukee and started overland to Janesville.
Vincent Pierce, the uncle of Attorney Charles E. Pierce, brought them here where they arrived June 28, 1846, seven years before the railroad came through.

Since that time he had lived here and gradually seen his nearest kin called by their Creator. Finally he and a single brother survived.
Today Mayhew V. Loudon mourns.
Living at 117 North High street, but a block from where his brother was run down, he was attracted by the gathering crowd, only to be recognized and caught by a kindly person and led aside as portions of the body were gathered together and placed in the undertaker's basket. He is the last of the New England Loudons.

James Loudon is survived by two daughters, Mrs. Lucy Hines of 308 Race street, with whom he made his home, and by Mrs. Dean Adams of Cedar Rapids, Ia., who less than two weeks ago visited her father here while on her way east to join her husband, who had been taking medical treatment.

STATE CONVENTION OPENS ON WEDNESDAY

STATE SUNDAY SCHOOL ASSO-

JANESVILLE.

EXPECT BIG TURNOUT

One Thousand Visitors From All Parts of Wisconsin Will Gather for Monster Educational Rally.

Sessions of the Wisconsin State Sunday School association's annual convention will open in Janesville on Wednesday and will continue over Thursday and Friday. The program, which has been previously announced, includes many important lectures and addresses by speakers of national reputation in the line of Sunday school and educational work. It will attract delegates from every part of Wisconsin, the number of persons from out-

PROF. M. V. O'SHEA.

side of Janesville, who will be in this city for the convention being estimated at one thousand.

The initial meeting of the convention will be held tomorrow morning at nine o'clock, which will be a conference of the officers of the various county Sunday school associations, at which will be discussed plans for more effective county wide work. The first general session of the convention will be Wednesday afternoon at two o'clock, with the president, W. W.
Hughes, presiding. Prof. M. V. O'Shea of the University of Wisconsin will be the principal speaker at this session on the topic "Every Day Traits of Child Nature." Prof. O'Shea will also talk at the Wednesday session, which is convened at seven-thirty. All of the general sessions will be held in the First Congregational church.

The convention meetings are open to the public and will be of special interest to parents as well as to Sunday school teachers and workers. "It should be made plain that the convention is called for the purpose of discussing child training," said Rev. F.
H. Brigham today. "Important educational subjects will be treated by leaders in Sunday school and educational work. It is a real opportunity for fathers and mothers of Janesville and the vicinity to learn some of the more advanced methods of teaching and training their children. The public is urged to take advantage of the gatherings."

A prominent feature of the convention will be Thursday night's session, when an adult Bible class demonstration will be held. Three hundred members of Bible classes in various churches from Rock county cities and communities, will occupy the main body of the church. Clinton, Edgerton, Beloit and Evansville have promised to send large delegations especially for this session. It will be one of the big things of the entire convention.

Delegates from the northern cities of the state are expected to arrive tonight or early tomorrow morning. All trains will be met by a flying squadron of automobiles in charge of J. E.
Lane, and a competent committee which will see to it that the delegates and guests are transported to the convention headquarters at the Cargill M. E. church, where they will be registered and assigned to homes for lodging. At the headquarters there will also be the exhibits of the publishers and the Sunday schools, the information bureau, the postoffice for the delegates, and the rest room.
Here also can be found the state officers and the chairman of the local committees in charge of arrangements and other details.

The arrangements for entertainment include provisions for lodgings in Janesville homes and breakfasts each morning during the session. A small number of delegates can be accommodated for dinner and supper at the Congregational church.

TOBACCO MEN FACE SHORTAGE OF LABOR

Matter Will Be Investigated by Commercial Club in Effort to Relieve Situation.

Several tobacco dealers have brought up the question of sufficient female help with which to operate the various warehouses which open usually about the first of the year, and the Commercial club, through General Secretary Kuhn, will make a canvass of the dealers to ascertain definitely the condition of each dealer with relation to the help situation and offer the services of the club to the end that sufficient help may be brought here to meet their requirements.

Secretary Kuhn's monthly financial statement of the club's condition, read at the meeting Monday, indicates a good financial condition showing a balance of some $800 on hand.

The possible location of a milk condensing plant was discussed and the arrival of an official of a prominent company within the next two weeks will be looked to with interest. There seems to be a considerable milk shortage with those plants located here at present, which will doubtless be relieved in the near future.

A suggestion made that fitting exercises be held to dedicate to the people of Janesville the ornamental street lighting system, met with favor. While the poles have not all been removed from West Milwaukee street, they will soon be, and it seems fitting that the work started and made possible by the activities of the Commercial club in conjunction with the commission of the city be recognized in a public way.
It is not amiss to remark that the lighting system represents one of the newest and most up-to-date plans of street lighting and is causing much favorable comment from visitors.

The publicity committee of the commercial club would like some suggestions from the citizens as to the most appropriate manner of dedicating this new work to all the people. What would you suggest?

COOPER IS ELOQUENT DENOUNCING WILSON

CONGRESSMAN RIDICULES DEMO-CRATIC ADMINISTRATION AND URGES ELECTION
OF HUGHES.

EMPHASIS ON TARIFF

Cites Labor Conditions Under Underwood Tariff Act Previous to European War to Prove Need for Protection.

Congressman Henry Allen Cooper of the first Wisconsin district, a candidate to succeed himself, delivered a speech at the republican rally Monday evening at the Myers theatre in which he denounced the Wilson administration as vacillating and inefficient and urged the return of the republican party to power in order to insure the public welfare and prosperity of the nation. He placed special emphasis

CONGRESSMAN H. A. COOPER.

during the eleven months in which the Underwood tariff act was in effect, previous to the European war, as sufficient argument for the importance of upon the need of a protective tariff and he cited the conditions obtained protection for American industries.

"I have no intention to attack the president's integrity," declared Mr.
Cooper, "but I have the right as any American citizen has the right to criticize a public official, even though he is the president of the United States, if that criticism is based upon the facts which are indisputable."

Is Eloquent Speaker.
Mr. Cooper grew eloquent in his references to the nobility of labor, in his appeal for patriotism, in his laudation of Abraham Lincoln, in his earnest appeal for a protective tariff. He referred with biting sarcasm to the pretensions of the democratic administration with regard to its domestic accomplishments; he heaped ridicule upon the argument so frequently set forth that "Wilson kept us out of war," and he became bitter in his reference to the affair at Vera Cruz, which he pictured as the most vivid coloring of which a forceful orator is capable.

"President Wilson has declared within the last few days," said Mr. Cooper in the early part of his address, "that the legislative accomplishments during the four years of his occupancy of the White House have been greater than the republican achievements of thirty years. The president has forgotten the republican party's work in behalf of labor, the fact that it enacted the first eight-hour law which the postal clerks are now enjoying; he forgotten the Delivered-Hepburn act, prohibiting railroad rebates; he forgot the establishment of the department of commerce and labor; he forgot the reforestation act; he forgot the pure food and drug act; he forgot the federal meat inspection act; he forgot the act creating the Panama canal zone;
he forgot the act establishing civil liberty in the Philippine islands; he forgot other great pieces of legislation enacted through the efforts of the republican party, and yet he is a historian."

"The president is a very great man, but such forgetfulness will become such towering greatness."

Rob Republicans of Credit.
Taking up various acts passed during the democratic administration, Mr.
Cooper declared it was hardly fair for the democrats to take all the credit.

He referred to the child labor bill, opposed in the house committee by three democratic members, who filed a memorandum, but was favored by all the republican members. The bill passed the house with more republicans voting for it than democrats and with only two republicans voting against it, while 44 democrats opposed it. With regard to the tariff commission, Mr.
Cooper was vehement in denouncing it because the act which provided for it guaranteed it a life for but a year at a time, so long as congress will pass an appropriation to allow it to continue its work. He pointed out that the recommendations of a tariff commission were at the mercy of congress. What would happen, he asked, if the commission should urge a protective schedule to which congress pledged as it is to the plank in its platform that the principle of protection is contrary to the constitution?

"The democrats have made much of the new federal reserve act, a good law—I voted for it—and have claimed that this country would have been thrown into the worst panic in its history when the European war broke out if it had not been for the federal reserve system. I refer you to no other authority than William G. McAdoo, a member of the president's cabinet, secretary of the treasury and the president's son-in-law, who says in a written report that it was greatly to be regretted that the reserve act was not yet effective when the war broke out."

Ridicules War Argument.
"Then we are confronted with that great argument that 'he kept us out of war,'" continued Mr. Cooper. "It's important it true. But do you live in a republic where one man can keep us out of war? Don't you know that the president cannot declare war under the constitution, but that that power is especially delegated to congress? Fight who? Did England want to attack us, from whom she was borrowing hundreds of millions of dollars and receiving munitions and supplies, shipped after shipment? Did we want to attack her, our debtor? Did Germany, hemmed in by a ring of fire, want to attack us? Or did Turkey, or Russia, or France or any of the nations in the European conflict? What a struggle the president had to keep us out of war!"

Cooper grew indignant in his refutation of the Vera Cruz incident and declared that if it were not for the fact that the attention of America was riveted upon the European war, the fiasco at Vera Cruz and the failure of the Underwood tariff as a revenue getter would be enough to insure the greatest republican victory since the Civil war.

Dwelling at length on the tariff issue, he recalled the unrest, the lack of work and the closed factories under the democratic tariff before business revived under the stimulus of the European war. He ridiculed in scathing terms the excuse advanced by the president that the depression was psychological, and he urged the necessity of a protective tariff to hold up the standards of American labor and to prevent an influx of goods made in the Orient or in Europe by pauper labor after the war ends.

Makes Plea for Hughes.
Finally Cooper made an appeal for Candidate Hughes, urging his election as a fearless leader, who will give the nation the benefit of his sound judgment and efficient leadership.
There was an audience of several hundred present, which broke out with enthusiastic applause at the telling points in the speech.

There will be a regular meeting of Harry L. Gifford Camp No. 23, U. S.
W. V. at East Side Odd Fellows' hall on Wednesday evening at eight o'clock. Every member is requested to be present. C. H. Cox, commander.

DR. LAPP IS CALLED TO CLEVELAND, OHIO

Acting Pastor of Baptist Church Will Serve in Similar Capacity at Cleveland First Church.

Dr. C. E. Lapp, who has been acting pastor of the First Baptist church in this city since the resignation of the Rev. Joseph C. Hazen last spring, has accepted a call to serve as acting pastor of the First Baptist church in Cleveland, Ohio. He expects to leave Janesville shortly for his new field of duty. The Rev. G. G. Pierson of Grand Forks, North Dakota, has accepted a call of the local church to become its permanent pastor and will be here within a few weeks to relieve Dr. Lapp.

The First Church of Cleveland is one of the leading churches of the Baptist denomination in Ohio. It has a large membership and a wide sphere of influence which makes it a most important charge.
Dr. Lapp has been a most efficient minister for the Baptist church in this city. He demonstrated his ability to get closely in touch with the religious life of the community within the shortest possible time and has made a large number of friends who will extend their well wishes to him in his new position. He has been efficient as an organizer, active in Bible school work and a constructive worker during his term of service in this city. Members of the Janesville church feel that the institution has been greatly benefited by his ministrations.

TELLS THE TALE.

Today the sixteen million voters of the United States will cast their ballots and as a result will name a president, various United States senators and congressmen and governors in different states. The hour will be a historic one for the nation. This is a great election. It gives the people an opportunity to expand and exploit itself. It creates new ideals and casts down old idols. From one end of this great country of ours to the other, from Maine to California, from the Gulf of Mexico to the Great Lakes to the Gulf of Alaska, the vote of the citizen is being cast. The press of the country howl forth their praise or their vituperation and when it is all over the sixteen million franchised voters decide for themselves who shall control the destinies of the nation for the next four years. When it is all over business settles down or settles up, as the case may be, and the world goes on as usual. Today marks the climax of the summer's work that began months earlier, reached a focus with the nomination of the presidential candidates and now ends with the election. The results should be pretty clearly defined by midnight and the winner in the great presidential race known. The Gazette has made special preparation to announce the results as quickly as obtainable over a special leased wire from the Associated Press offices and will throw the figures on a screen opposite the office. Aside from that the whistle at the School for the Blind will be blown at half hour intervals to announce which candidate is ahead. In this way it is expected the general public can be served to the best advantage in an expedient manner as possible. Meanwhile we await the result, having confidence in the good sense of the voters of this country to make a wise selection.

CAMPAIGN ROORBACKS.

The last days of a presidential campaign are a period of fever. The pulse of democracy beats rapidly. Mental judgments are influenced by hysteria. The politicians, shifting at their chosen game, take advantage of all this popular temperature. They circulate inherently improbable stories that they would not dare to put out a month before. They realize that there is not time thoroughly to disprove their statements. Even if they are shown to be guilty of misrepresentation, the voters will forget about it by the next election.

Every intelligent citizen should know pretty well two weeks ahead how he will vote. There might be some excuse for indecision in unimportant contests. Life is too busy for the average citizen to investigate the whole history of a candidate for the legislature or county office. But the records of candidates for high office is an open book. It has been searched and combed for flaws long before this. Eleventh hour revelations do not strike a just balance.

Yet a very considerable block of voters remains indeterminate up to the last few days. It is enough to determine the result of any close contest. Some of these floaters are swayed by amazingly slight motives. If some seeming slur on the race, the class, the associations of the voter are alleged, all other considerations are cast overboard. Many thousands of citizens act at the last moment on some trifling prejudice that has no foundation in fact whatever.

The voter does well, therefore, to pay little attention to the hot words and final roorbacks of a campaign. If an issue has merit, it would have found its way to the light before this. The hysteria of these final days throws no new light. The case has already gone to the jury. The thoughtful citizen has registered his own verdict now.

RECEIVING THE RETURNS.

If one were looking for the most typical and picturesque phases of American life, he should surely include the election night crowd tonight waiting for the returns. All over the country these gatherings are assembled. From the throng of people massed in some great city square, down to the little knot of citizens gathered at the rural telephone or telegraph office, the whole country is sitting up for the news.

Of course there are those calm and conservative souls who go home and go to bed at 10 p. m. as usual. Often they are people who are keenly interested in politics. But their regular habits are too firmly fixed to be suspended even for one night.

In city surroundings, it is a scene of cheers and horseplay, a general air of which the losing party are the butt of much persiflage. In thousands of hang-outs, little knots of political experts and workers gather and argue over percentages and forecast results. Over all there is a spirit of good nature and an absence of bitterness that is very creditable to the American temperament.

The fact that a lady reads papers at the Woman's club on the folly of girls who will not take positions as servants, does not prove that she teaches her own daughters anything about housework.

The boy who hates to put on a starched collar because the other fellows will laugh at him, is the same one who in a year or two will be kicking because Dad doesn't buy him a dress suit.

After denouncing the arbitrary and arrogant acts of labor unions before an audience of farmers, the candidates go into the factory towns and expound the great benefits of unionism.

Though they couldn't add up a column of half a dozen numbers themselves, the election night crowd is disgusted because 15,000,000 votes are not counted and tabulated by 3:30.

The winter lecture courses are resplendent with keen intellectual interest provided that three thumbfuls of tea and a chocolate wafer are served to each person attending.

The merchant who claims that the public does not read advertising is the same one who finds fault so bitterly because the public is not interested in his efforts to please them.

The politicians are indignant at the idea that they would buy votes, but they are of course glad to pay the voters for the valuable time it takes to go to the polls.

The experts on the war get high prices from the newspapers and magazines for long articles, the substance of which is that if Germany weakens she will get licked.

After claiming that their party is the party of youth and strength, the political managers appropriated a large sum to cart indolent voters to the polls.

Election returns come in slowly from many localities, but perhaps the ballots have to be held back until it is learned how much of a majority is required.

The football season does not seem to attract as much interest as ordinarily this year, but perhaps the usual number of students have not been killed and injured.

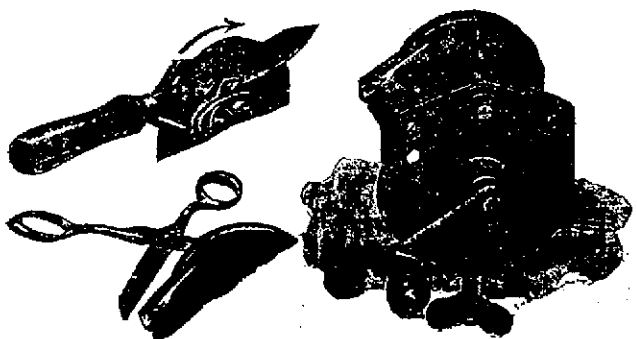

People who are indifferent to the sufferings of the soldiers of Europe begin to realize the horrors of war as they pay $11 a barrel for flour.

It is very appropriate to speak of the burning eloquence of the campaign speakers, as they gave out such a lot of hot air.

As the days go by
That while some like oats

One-eyed Prouty, the veteran crossing tender, awoke with a start. One-eyed Prouty always woke up with a start of about three seconds, and with such a good start he never had much difficulty getting there.

The 7:42, he gasped.
He was right for once. The 7:42 from Sticksville was thundering around Pudden curve. If it once got past the crossing, it would crash into a freight car loaded with Gouger's powerful self-raising wheat, and the consequences would be fierce.

One-eyed Prouty leaped to his feet, seized his lantern and waved it frantically in the middle of the track. It lit a dark night, for none but small stars were out.

"Great All Bahat!" swore Prouty. "He's not even slackening!"
An then waved his lantern in perfect frenzy.

But the 7:42 rushed on unheeding, tossed him forty feet and buried into the car of Gouger's yeast.

"I wonder," mused one-eyed Prouty painfully, "I wonder if it could be because the durn lantern wasn't lit."

Well-Watered City.
Astrakhan is half a city of the waters. Aimless branches of the great Volga twist through the outlying sections, flecked with white sails and dotted with rowboats. The big river steamers come almost into the heart of the city. This is the naval base of Russia's Caspian fleet. Between the city and the inland sea the waters spread and widen until the lower villages are often made up chiefly of anchored barges and houseboats.

When Summer Scored.
Once when Charles Summer was in London he gave a ready reply. At a dinner given in his honor he spoke of "the ashes" of some dead hero. "Ashes! What American English!" rudely broke in an Englishman; "dust, you mean, Mr. Summer. We don't burn our dead in this country." "Yet," instantly replied Mr. Summer, with a courteous smile, "your poet Gray tells us that 'Even in our ashes live their wonted fires.'" The American was not criticized again that evening.

KENNETH B. JEFFRIS WEDS KAE BLODGETT

CEREMONY PERFORMED LAST EVENING AT HALF PAST EIGHT AT THE CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH.

TO RESIDE IN CHICAGO

Bride and Groom Leave Reception on Their Wedding Journey—To Travel Through the East.

Last evening at the First Congregational church occurred one of the most beautiful weddings that Janesville has known for some years, when Miss Kae Blodgett, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank H. Blodgett, became the bride of Kenneth B. Jeffris, son of Mr. and Mrs. William S. Jeffris.

The entire choir loft was buried in a mass of flowers—pinks, chrysanthemums, autumn leaves and wild smilax bunched up so that the whole front of the church was transformed into a veritable garden. For an hour before the ceremony, Miss Ada Pond gave an organ recital.

At half past eight the strains of the wedding march from Lohengrin announced the ceremony. The bridegroom was escorted by his best man, Virginia Parken and Annette Wilcox, in pink and blue tulle. Following them came the ushers, Floyd Robb, Kenneth B. Blodgett, the bridegroom's brother, and the bridesmaids, Miss Margaret Jeffris, Miss Elizabeth Holmes, and Miss Phoebe McManus.

Two of the bridesmaids wore white silvercloth, and two in gowns of white tulle over light blue satin. They carried large bouquets of pink snapdragons and roses.

The maid of honor, Miss Marion Blodgett, wore a dress of pink tulle over embroidered pink tulle, with a train of pink tulle. Following her was the bride, Kae Blodgett, in a gown of white tulle over light blue satin, with a train of white tulle over light blue satin.

The bride, on the arm of her father, who gave her away in marriage, was lovely. She was dressed in a gown of white tulle over light blue satin, with a train of white tulle over light blue satin. Her veil was of white tulle caught with orange blossoms. The train was of broad silvercloth. She carried a shower bouquet of roses and lilies-of-the-valley.

The Reverend Charles E. Ewing read the marriage service. Immediately following the ceremony the members of the bridal party, with Mr. and Mrs. Blodgett and Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Jeffris, held a reception in Assembly Hall. The old hall was beautifully decorated with great festoons of wild smilax and pink chrysanthemums and autumn leaves. Pink shaded lights were blended in with the pink of the flowers. After the reception, the bride and groom, with their bridesmaids and ushers, left for Chicago.

ELECTION RETURNS THROWN ON SCREEN

Plans Have Been Perfected for Complete National and State Service for the Public's Benefit Tonight.

With a special wire of the Western Union service connected with the Milwaukee office of the Associated Press, the news of the result of the election in both state and national will flash into the Gazette office as fast as compiled in the various distributing centers of the country. The fact that in tonight's issue several incomplete and some complete reports are published shows the speed with which they are being gathered. These reports will be placed on typewritten sheets and thrown onto the screen strung on the St. Robinson and some building on East Milwaukee street, across from the Gazette office, as fast as they can be made. The telephones in the Gazette business office—77 both lines—will be available for the public who desire information, but no calls of this nature will be received over the editorial rooms phone.

The plan to notify the public, every half hour, starting at six-thirty, as to whether Hughes or Wilson was ahead at the time by blowing the whistle at the school for the blind will give many an opportunity to learn the results without coming down town. One long blast if Hughes leads, three short ones if Wilson leads. Two long blasts if Hughes wins and five short blasts if Wilson wins.

The children born to this home were four boys and one girl. The oldest, Lewis, died when a half old. Emma passed on at the age of eighteen. The sons remaining are: George H. of Seattle, Wash., Dr. Charles W. of Chicago, Ill., and the daughter, Mrs. H. F. Bliss.

The son and daughter of a widowed sister, James C. and Faith Wilmarth, also came into the home when children. The son, James, died at the age of six. Faith died at the age of sixteen.

James was a son in the family until obliged to go south on account of the long heart found room for them. Faith died at the age of sixteen. James was a son in the family until obliged to go south on account of the long heart found room for them. Faith died at the age of sixteen.

It is often said that the record of every life is its own epitaph. Mrs. Bliss was a woman whose friends were numbered in the thousands. She was a woman who enjoyed the love and respect of all who knew her.

She was a Dorcas in the church which she served so long and faithfully. Her life was an inspiration, and her pleasant smile evidenced the hopeful optimism which possessed her, and which she radiated to all who came in contact with her.

BOYS' EYE HURT WHILE
EXTRACTING RIFLE SHELL

While attempting to remove a jammed cartridge from his .22 calibre rifle this morning, Stewart Pennycook, the small son of James Pennycook, who lives on a farm near this city, was severely injured in the left eye when the cartridge exploded and the shell was buried in the eyeball.

The boy was endeavoring to extract the cartridge with a nail, when in some manner he exploded it, the jagged shell was driven with great force into his eye. He was at once hurried to Dr. F. R. Lintelman, the doctor declared this morning that it was merely a question of waiting a few days to determine whether blood poisoning would set in; if this does occur the boy will lose the sight of his left eye.

A MOMENT WITH THE MUSE

The Fly in the Soup.
When I have a pain in my thigh, it seems to me I'd had no fear of all men's in the nose or eye; if that a clump does seize my side or if there's a dimple in my knee, I cry there's something in it, and I'm not sure I could abide most any other pain than these.
So when the toothache bids me howl I think that I'll be happy when I've paid a dentist's bill and all my teeth are hale and well again. And if I have no aches or pains, no loins to treat for, rheumatism, some other bother, then I'm not about my bow and arrow some such idle rot as "Sooth, would I be happy now if it were so or that were not?" My soul must be a little sour for though I've been blessed by the score, I was ever thus since childhood's hour, I either whine for several more or then I up with roars and wails and nothing short of every joy, some dream of perfect bliss, avails to bid me cease. I do not know why I do this here below, he's bright and gay when I am not. All that I get I think my due, when there's not more I waive the thought.

"You Said Something." We know one fair young thing of eighteen who has opinions as to the best gasoline for a motor car, knows which tires give the most mileage, can give the best of directions to Indianapolis, has in mind 25,000 chuckles in Howard county roads, knows the names of 365 different kinds of dress coats, knows the kind of shoes that girls are wearing on Broadway, New York, and the best kind of chicken to try for a picnic luncheon. In addition to this she can bake biscuits, operate a vacuum cleaner, broil a steak, decorate a dinner table tastefully, play golf, walk five miles without fatigue, dance, play the piano, sing, wash a baby, and teach a Sunday school class. She is well acquainted with 197 girls and 278 young men, and has a speaking acquaintance with 502 more. She knows the location of nine of her old friends, and she keeps fourteen serial stories of the magazines in her head at the same time, and keeps the 752 characters in their places. Her name is Miss Letitia. She was a whole flock of her. This girl of today has our entire approval, and we don't think she is appreciated enough. (Kokomo Ind.) Tribune.

Asked youthful Homer Hearn.
"Oh, yes," said modern Dolly Dove, "but only now and then."

It probably will never happen, but it seems only fair that sometime a small boy be given prizes to wash his school teacher's neck and ears. And that all other small boys be present at the clinic.

Fannie Ward, who has a fortune of her own, and wears real pearls in the movies, has a part now which requires her to wear overalls. She is said to have had the overalls of ordinary material made by the most expensive costumer in New York. The name of the movie in which we are to be favored with a view of these overalls de luxe is "Betty of the Orange Country."

"LA TOSCA."
Sarah Bernhardt's arrival in this country gives new interest to the marketing of a two-reel movie starring her. The gambler hall shown in one scene, is typical New York style. The rugs used are valued at $4,000, while the paintings and draperies run up into startling figures. The producer, Fred Baischofer, was compelled to build an expensive roulette wheel and other gambling paraphernalia for use in the gambling scene owing to the recent political shake-up in Los Angeles.

Mother Love Aids Son in Trenches

It Brings Relief to Boy Standing His Watch Deep in Mud.

Once upon a time, only a few months after this terrible world war had begun, Private Bailey, a soldier in the ranks had stood for days in the trenches "somewhere in France." The cold rains soaked him to the skin; the mud was deep. He had no rest. Wary and aching with rheumatic pains, he recalled the faith his mother had in Sloan's Liniment. He asked for it in his next letter home. A large bottle was immediately sent him and a few applications killed the pain, once more he was able to stand the severe exposure. He shared this wonderful muscle-soother with his comrades, and they all agreed it was the greatest "reinforcement" that had ever come to their rescue. At your druggist, 25c, 50c, and $1.00 a bottle.

The QUARTERBREED

By ROBERT AMES BENNET

(Copyright by Brown & Fowler Co.)
She turned upon Hardy, unshed, defiant, haughty. "My mother was the granddaughter of Sitting Bull. What have you to say to that, Mr. West Pointer?"
"Nothing, Miss Dupont, unless—" he paused, smiled and continued—"unless it is to remark that I am glad the police are so near."

The girl's eyes flashed with anger. With a swift movement she bent over and snatched her driving-whip from its socket on the dashboard and stood poised, the whip upraised to strike. Dupont's heavy jaw dropped. Vandervyn swung his rifle around, his large blue eyes glinting with eagerness. Hardy faced the girl with no change in his smile. Had his steady gaze wavered for an instant, she would have slashed him across the face.

"You—you!" she whispered. "Twit me with the treacherous killing of my grandfather, would you?"
"Treacherous? How is that?" he asked.

"He was murdered—by the police!" she cried. "You know it."
"I beg your pardon," he replied. "I had not the slightest idea of alluding to what to you must be a painful occurrence. But, since you have referred to it, I wish to say that you are mistaken. Sitting Bull was shot while resisting arrest. The police were acting under orders. The man who shot the chief had first been shot by one of the chief's men."

The scarlet that flamed in the girl's cheeks deepened to crimson. Her gaze wavered. Instead of striking Hardy, the whip flashed down across the backs of the team. The young broncos plunged and jumped forward; they whirled the buckboard down the slope away from the river.

The girl's companions jerked their ponies about to gallop after her. Hardy spoke to them in peremptory command: "Wait! Dupont, I shall ask you to bring my baggage from the railroad. Here come the police. I shall detain four of their number to go with you as escort."

"We don't need no escort," said Dupont. "Do we, Mr. Van?"
"They will go in place of Mr. Vandervyn," explained Hardy. "I must ask him to accompany me to the agency."

The young man looked the new agent up and down with an insolent smile on his handsome, boyish face. "What if I do not choose to go back?"
"It would put me to the necessity of finding a new chief clerk," countered Hardy.

The other evidently had expected an arbitrary order. He bit his lip. It was plain that he was puzzled over the audacity of the reply. Was it a threat, or merely a statement due to misapprehension?

"If you wish to resign," added the captain, "may I request you to telegraph for your successor to be immediately appointed and ordered here?"
"I'd resign quick enough if I could," said Vandervyn. "You're the last man I'd let order me around if I could help it."

Hardy turned to the stolid-faced trader.
"Please remember my baggage. You had better ride on after your daughter. The escort will soon follow."

CHAPTER IIIConfidences.

The rescuers from the agency had reined in their sweating ponies to a lone when they first caught sight of the party on the butte side of the coulee. They straggled down the gully at a walk, eight short-haired Indian policemen in blue uniform, and a tall, loose-lipped young halfbreed in ordinary frontier clothes. As they stopped in the stream to water their ponies, each furtively studied the rider who was approaching on the big, rangy mare.

"You're too late, Charlie," called Vandervyn. "Captain Hardy climbed the butte, and the whole bunch hit out."

"Soldiers?" queried the halfbreed.

"No, he's alone—our new agent," explained Vandervyn as his pony brought him alongside Hardy at the edge of the stream. "Captain, this is Charlie Redbear, our issue clerk and interpreter."

"Interpreter?" repeated Hardy. "Redbear, do any of the police understand English?"

"No, sir, only a few words," mumbled the halfbreed.
"Tell them I am a captain of the horse soldiers—the Longhorns. I have been sent here to be the agent."

Redbear interpreted in musical Lakotah, accompanying his words with swift signs. The swarthy policemen grunted approvingly, and their leader rolled out a sonorous reply. The halfbreed interpreted mechanically: "He says your eye is straight. He says they are ready to trail and fight the Indians whose hearts are bad."

"They are not to pursue the party," ordered Hardy. "I shall call a council of the chiefs, and ascertain the cause of the tribal unrest. Tell them."

Redbear hesitated, and looked uncertainly at Vandervyn. The chief clerk spoke to him in sharp reproof: "Do as you're told, Charlie. Captain Hardy is now in command of the reservation."

The halfbreed stared in astonishment, but hastened to interpret. At once the faces of the policemen became stolid. They cast covert glances at Vandervyn. Without seeming to notice their sudden change of manner, Hardy selected four to act as escort to the Indian trader and his daughter. The rest of the party followed him back up the gully.

From the first the mare walked out in the lead. She would soon have left behind even Vandervyn's quick-stepping pinto had not her rider happened to glance about and catch the troubled expression on the younger man's face. Hardy waited for him to come alongside, and gravely remarked: "I wish to express my regret, Mr. Vandervyn, that my detail here has deprived you of your expected promotion."

Vandervyn's small mouth curved with a cynical smile, but softened to a more agreeable expression as he met the other's gaze. "You admit it?" he muttered.

"Having accepted the detail, I cannot now ask to be relieved," said Hardy. "But the extra pay was not one of the inducements. Permit me to suggest that arrangements can be made to divert to your salary the amount in excess of my regular compensation as an officer."

The offer was as unexpected as it was generous. Vandervyn flushed, bit his lip, and replied half insolently: "You needn't think just because—No, that's not quite—You may mean well, but that's no excuse—"

"My fault, sir. Pardon me," apologized Hardy.
Vandervyn looked ahead at the mountains, considered, and turned to his companion with what seemed a cordial smile. "I am not used to being patronized, captain; but as you did not mean it that way—"

"Not at all."
Vandervyn nodded. "You now understand that I'm not one of the common run of Indian service employees. I was slated for attaché to our embassy at the Court of Saint James—celebrated the coming event with some friends, and wound up by heaving a brick through a window of the White House. Uncle shipped me out here until the storm should blow over."

Hardy may have recalled the harings in which he had shared at West Point.

"I'm Not Used to Being Patronized, Captain."

"I see no reason why we should not become friends and work together for the good of the tribe."

"It's a go," agreed Vandervyn, and as if cleared of all ill temper by his outburst, he began a lively conversation on official society in the national capital.

The party topped the rise between the river and Sioux creek, and rode down the winding road that skirted its willow-fringed bank to the crossing of the stream. As they rounded the spur ridge on the far side, Redbear rode up on Hardy's right, and pointed to a small cabin among the quaking aspens in the mile-wide curve of the stream to his only comment was: "You're fortunate to get any appointment." "Oh, I don't know," carelessly replied Vandervyn. "I didn't wake the president, and I had some of my wad left. The watchman sent me home in a taxi. But the infernal grafter must have peached. I got this instead of London."

"Best thing for you."
"You think so?" said Vandervyn, his wide-open eyelids drooping. "I've been six months in this God-forsaken jumping-off place. I wouldn't have stayed six days if it hadn't been for Marie."

"Miss Dupont seems to be a very spirited young woman," dryly commented Hardy.
"Wait till you see her put on dog. She was three or four years at a convent in Ottawa. They must have formed her out as a parlor-maid in some select British family. She can give a perfect imitation of a real lady—when she chooses."

"Yes?" said Hardy.
"You'd take it for the sure-nuff article," went on Vandervyn. "And that's not all. She can cook like an angel. Says she took a course in domestic science. But it must be hereditary. I'll give odds, one of her paternal ancestors was a French chef. French, that's the word. The way she has with meat! Even this halfbreed Redbear thinks he is in the running. Nogen was mad over her. He even would have married her. But he was not a man of family or culture. Fancy Jake Dupont for a father-in-law! Only thing, his squaw died five or six years ago. That was when he sent the girl to Ottawa."

Hardy looked at the mountains and changed the subject: "May I ask you to give the particulars of the killing of Mr. Nogen?"

Vandervyn's eyelids drooped low and opened again in a wide, guileless stare. "There's little to tell. Nogen and I and Redbear were riding into the mountains. We met the murderer. He and Nogen quarreled. He shot Nogen—killed him. Then Redbear and I fired, and one of us got him—we don't know which of us it was. That's all. You'll find it in the coroner's report. I kept a copy in the office at the agency."

"Strange that an Indian should attack a white man that way," observed Hardy. "Was the cause ascertained?"
Vandervyn twisted the tip of his blond mustache. "Well, it may be all talk, but I gather that the trouble was over this ore-buying. Nogen thought it a good thing to encourage. The chiefs felt ugly because the goods were not paid to them instead of to the laborers—the bucks and squaws who dug the ore, you know. The chiefs stirred up a lot of bad blood. No doubt they instigated the murder. They want to boss the tribe their own way."

"Let us trust that we shall have them in hand before fall," "Fall?" echoed Vandervyn. "You expect to stay all summer? That shuts me out of my promotion."

"You may receive the appointment of attaché."

"Perhaps I don't want it just now. You forget Marie."

The gravity of the officer's face hardened to sternness. "Mr. Vandervyn, kindly bear in mind that, as agent of this reservation, I am in charge of the moral as well as the material welfare of every member of the tribe."

Vandervyn quivered like a thoroughbred flogged with the lash. His voice shook with passion:
"Damn your impudence! I'll have you understand you're not talking to one of your rough-neck recruits. My ancestors were gentlemen before yours were ever heard of."

"I regret that you do not seem to have inherited their gentlemanly manners," came back the cool rejoinder. Vandervyn's reddened face went crimson. The veins of his forehead began to swell. But with a strong effort he repressed his anger and forced a smile. "You want me one better, Hardy. I throw down."

The officer responded with instant sympathy:
"I see no reason why we should not become friends and work together for the good of the tribe."

"It's a go," agreed Vandervyn, and as if cleared of all ill temper by his outburst, he began a lively conversation on official society in the national capital.

The party topped the rise between the river and Sioux creek, and rode down the winding road that skirted its willow-fringed bank to the crossing of the stream. "Oh, I don't know," carelessly replied Vandervyn. "I didn't wake the president, and I had some of my wad left. The watchman sent me home in a taxi. But the infernal grafter must have peached. I got this instead of London."

"See my house, sir," he said. "Looks well built," remarked Hardy, his fieldglasses at his eyes. "Quite new, I see. You have still to put dirt on this corner of the roof."

"And to put a squaw inside," added Vandervyn.
The halfbreed's jaw muscles twitched, but he did not look away from Hardy. "I got a letter from my sister Oiana. She says she can't stay at school. She says she will die if they make her stay at school. I want her to come and cook for me till I get married."

"How old is she?"
"More than seventeen. She is sick to come. She says she will die."

"Very well. But you must take good care of her until she is married."

"Yes, sir. I've got a lot of money," replied the halfbreed, with the proneness of a weak nature to boast. "I've got almost—"

"Almost enough to buy you two squaws," cut in Vandervyn.
Redbear started to speak, caught the other's eye, and reined in his pony. Hardy did not notice this. They had rounded the toe of the spur ridge, and he was gazing up the green valley that lay outstretched in a circle of hills larger and far more picturesque than the Catskills. Sioux creek swirled out of a canyon at the far end, to meander down a winding channel fringed with bushes and aspens and other small trees.

On a natural terrace, or "bench," two miles up, the glasses showed the log buildings at the agency. Midway down to Redbear's cabin but across the creek was a large post-and-rail corral. Vandervyn had resumed with zest his talk about the social galettes of which he had been deprived for half a year. Hardy said little, but his eye was busy taking in the natural features of the beautiful valley.

When they came to the slope of the bench, or terrace, Vandervyn noticed the intent look of his companion, and inquired: "Well, what do you think of it? Talk about Siberian exile: That is the limit alone over here."

Dinner Stories

A train slowed up at a busy country station. A man was seen to put his head excitedly out of the window of one of the coaches.

"There's a woman in here fainting!" he cried. "Has any one got any brandy or whisky? Quick!"

Some one in the crowd on the platform handed him a bottle. He uncorked it frantically, put it to his lips and took a noble pull.

"Ah!" he sighed, "that's better. It always did upset me to see a woman faint."

Some time ago, when Sir Ian Hamilton was reviewing a certain corps, a laughable incident occurred. One

An Effective Laxative For Growing Children

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin Highly Recommended as a Family Remedy.

In children the slightest irregularity of the bowels has a tendency to disturb the entire digestive system, and unless promptly remedied invites serious illness. The experienced mother knows that by training her children to regularity in this respect, and when occasion arises administering a mild laxative, she will have little need for the doctor's services.

Mrs. Leo Weigand, 3261 Central Ave., N. S., Pittsburgh, Pa., whose two boys, Frank and Joseph, are shown in the illustration, writes that she has found Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin a most effective laxative, not only for the children but also for herself, and that she will always keep it in the house to use when needed. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is a combination of simple laxative herbs with pepsin that acts easily and naturally, without griping or other pain or discomfort. It is pleasant to the taste, so that children like it, and is equally effective on the strongest constitution.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin can be obtained at any drug store for fifty cents, and should have a place in every home. It will save many times its cost in lessened doctor bills and maintain the health of the entire family. To avoid imitations and ineffective substitutes be sure to get Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. Too Late for Regrets.
Nancy was ready to go to her first party. "Try to be careful of this little blue dress, dear," cautioned her mother. "I am afraid it will not be so pretty after it is washed." An hour later Nancy came running home, sobbing wildly, holding up the skirt of her blue frock. "I did be careful," she sobbed, "but the ice cream fell in my lap. Oh, how I wish I had gone bare naked to the party!"

BADGERS SHOW PEP IN FACE OF DEFEAT

Squad Not Disheartened By Loss to Ohio State, Is Out to Win From Gophers and Illini.

(Special to the Gazette.)

Madison, Wis., Nov. 7.—The defeat at the hands of Ohio State on Saturday, although it practically eliminated Wisconsin from winning the conference title, failed to have any very great effect on the attitude of the squad in their work for the coming games. The coach, who was disappointed to see a disheartened squad appear for drill this afternoon at Camp Randall, but they were disappointed, as the players were not early and working with an added determination. Dr. Withington, although he did not see the game at Columbus, was informed of the team's work of correcting them. The Badger coach was in Minneapolis witnessing the Illinois-Minnesota contest, so did not see his own performance, so did not see his own performance, so did not see his own performance.

Badger players give the Badgers a chance to win the conference title, although the figures require Wisconsin to win from both Minnesota and Illinois and Northwestern and Ohio State to be beaten by comparative week eleven. Ohio State and Northwestern to meet on November 25 in what may be the title contest. Northwestern also has games with Iowa and Purdue, while Ohio State, in addition to meeting Northwestern, has a contest scheduled with Indiana.

Saturday will be an open date on the Badger schedule. Dr. Withington in order to keep his men in condition, has decided to stage a scrimmage for that day between the team composed of the All-American players, Buck, Kline and Dougherty will get into the game and attempt to win from the Badgers. In addition to this scrimmage a game will be played between the freshmen and sophomores.

During the practice this afternoon Withington had Kelly and Meyers at ends alternating with Crane and Kline. Star and Koch played tackle and Hancock and Gunderson guards. Carpenter played center for a short time but was replaced by Gray. The line was not as good as it was on Saturday, with the result that Withington only kept him at quarter for a short time. McCrory took his place and showed the men. Edler has not fully recovered, but worked for a short time at half back with Olson and Simpson. Berg and Krenz alternated in fullback. With two weeks remaining between the Minnesota game, having accidents, all of the Badger men should be in good condition. Both Simpson and Edler, who are not fully recovered, are injured players, but are ready to play the game of their life.

Friday evening and a day full of interesting events on Saturday. ADMITTS NATIONAL LEAGUE WAS WEAK

New York, Nov. 7.—The weakness of the National League brand of baseball as compared with the snappy brand dished out by the American League, pointed out by the United States league club, was admitted today by Governor John K. Tener, President of the National League.

It is not Wilbert Robinson who is so much to blame for the loss of the World Series, according to Gov. Tener, but is due to the fact that the players who made up the National League club were wholly unable to do the things which might have won ball games. It would have been useless, Tener contends, for Robinson to follow tactics other than the ones he did follow.

The feeling, Governor Tener agrees, was something awful and the Brooklyn club never had a chance against such a great organization as the Red Sox.

Tener, however, is extremely optimistic and he believes that before the time comes for another world series the league will be strengthened to such an extent that it will give its rival position of the steepest sort. Work is now being done, he declares, which will extra the National League undoubted strength.

The National League proxy agreed that there were several clubs in the National League at the time of the last playing season which would have been the best club in the National League won the pennant.

BADGER FRESH INDIGNANT WEARING OF THE GREEN IN WINTER

(Special to the Gazette.)

Madison, Wis., Nov. 7.—Freshmen at the University of Wisconsin were surprised and not pleased this morning at the announcement of the fact that they will be compelled to wear green togues from November 1 until Easter. This will mean that the freshmen will have to wear green spot caps until November 1 and were allowed to discard their insignia until Easter, but this year the newly chosen student body decided that the freshmen must wear a garb which marks them as distinct from the remaining students at the university.

MORRIS MILLER

The unexpected has happened. The brief experience as an actor enjoyed last winter by Pitcher Al Mamaux of the Pirates has had its effect; from now on until the Bucco squad hikes into the South for the annual training camp, "the millionaire kid's" handsome personage will "grace the footlights" of various high-class vaudeville houses throughout the country.

The elimination of speed events for two-year-old trotters and pacers in California was agreed to at a recent meeting of the directors of the Pacific Coast Trotting Horse Breeders' Association. With the state agricultural society there taking similar action, it eliminates the racing of two-year-olds from the program. Announcement was made by the directors that they consider the racing of the baby horses a detriment to their future worth on the turf.

If it is true that the National League board of directors means to call in a number of the Giants at its meeting in New York in December to hear their testimony regarding McGraw's charges that they laid down before Brooklyn it means a nice trip to Broadway, with all expenses paid for the witnesses. At that the players probably won't relish the assignment.

They are printing it as something new that Tommy each has been released by the Rochester International league club. As a matter of fact, Leach stipulated when he took the management of the Rochester team that it should be used as a contract for the one season only and it was so stated at the time. An answer to the query as to who will be Rochester's next manager would be the real piece of news.

Eugene Fraser, backer of the Lynn Eastern league club, like Andrew Roach of the Lowell club, says he likes baseball, but he can't stand the expense. He was out of pocket he says $100 for every game his team played last year and he has made it known that if the club is not taken off his hands forthwith he will surrender it to the league. General opinion is that Lynn will not be in the league next year.

Pitcher Wheeler Dell of the Brooklyn Dodgers, with $2,700, world's series money in his pocket lost his head and became a reckless gambler. He bought a Ford roadster and set out for Florida in it with his lunch stowed away under the seat. Reports from along the Atlantic coast reports a tin Lizzie, piloted by a tall gangling young man, making good headway southward with occasional stops for water and gasoline.

George Gibson, veteran catcher visiting in Pittsburgh, informs the newspaper men that he has reconsidered and probably will join the Giants. Maybe he will and maybe he won't. McGraw needed Gibson when he made the deal for his services with Pittsburgh, but it is to be doubted if the manager of the Giants can see him next season, now that he has seen McCarty added to his back-stopping department.

It would be a dull fall without Bill Rourke of Omaha announcing that his Western league club is for sale. Rourke is out with the usual pretty well and though they knock him now and then in Omaha it is doubtful if the fans in general would like to see him quit the game.

The announcement of the Tampa business men that they will hold the Chicago Cubs to their contract to train in the Florida city for several years to come is being met by a state of mind in Chicago that President Weegham is trying to get some club to take the contract off his hands. Three clubs are said to be nibbling at the bait. There is nothing wrong with Tampa as a training camp, but Weegham has set his heart on a trip to California.

Fred T. Chandler's advice to Bill Carrigan, who has quit baseball to become a banker, never to lose interest in his new field.
